Transcripcions (només si no pots escoltar l’àudio)

Transcripció 1 · Two New Years: Callum and Yuki

Callum: [cheerful] Hi, I’m Callum, from Edinburgh in Scotland. In Scotland, New Year’s Eve is called Hogmanay, and for us it’s bigger than Christmas! There’s a huge street party in the city centre, with concerts and fireworks over the castle at midnight. It’s usually freezing, so you wear about three jumpers. [laughs]

Callum: Then everyone holds hands and sings an old song, “Auld Lang Syne”. [laughs] Nobody knows all the words! It’s a song about old friends and remembering the good times. After midnight, we go “first-footing”: you visit your neighbours and you’re the first person to walk into their house in the new year.

Callum: You bring a small present, like shortbread or a piece of coal for the fire. My gran says the first visitor brings luck for the whole year, so she always makes sure a friendly neighbour comes first. Last year I was our neighbours’ first visitor, and they gave me a huge slice of cake. What I love is that the whole street feels like one big family.

Yuki: [calm] Hello, I’m Yuki, and I’m from Osaka in Japan. New Year, or Shōgatsu, is the most important holiday of the year for my family. Schools and many offices close for several days, and lots of people travel home to their parents’ houses. [thoughtful] It’s quite quiet, not like a party.

Yuki: On the thirty-first of December, we clean the whole house, so we can start the year fresh. In the evening we eat long noodles, because they mean a long life. At midnight, temple bells ring one hundred and eight times. On the first of January, we eat special food that my mother and grandmother cook for days, and we visit a shrine to pray for a good year. Children get money in small envelopes.

Yuki: We also send New Year cards to our friends and teachers, and they all arrive on the same morning. [softly] For me, New Year is about starting again. You leave the problems of the old year behind, and you thank your family for everything.
